TWO DIXON HOMES DAMAGED BY FIRE SATURDAY, TODAY

Dr. R. L. Baird, David Fane Residence, in Grip of Flames.

The residence of Dr. R. L. Baird, 208 E. Boyd St., was damaged to the extent of about $2000 by fire which started from sparks from the chimney at 10:30 this morning and for a time the entire structure together with its contents was threatened with destruction. A smoldering fire on the roof, fanned by a high wind, crept into the attic and then spread. The fire had gained considerable headway when discovered and an alarm turned in. The fire department upon arrival, used chemicals in the attic and it was necessary to play one stream of hose on the roof to extinguish the flames which were breaking through in many places. The damage is covered by insurance.

FIRE SATURDAY NIGHT

The Bart Dewey property on Chestnut street, occupied by Dave Fane, was badly damaged by fire Saturday night and the fire department was kept busy for three hours before the flames had been extinguished. Two loads of hose 1000 feet in length were used to drench out the flames, which had gained considerable headway. A neighbor living a block away discovered the fire about 9 o'clock and sent in the alarm. None of the members of the Fane family were at home and the fire, which is believed to have originated from an overheated furnace had spread throughout the house when the department arrived. The house and its contents were badly damaged, an estimate of the loss being placed at $3500, which is partially covered by insurance.

SIMPLIFICATION OF PRIMARY LAW FLAGG PROPOSAL

Would Have Precinct Committeemen Alone Chosen at Primary.

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Chicago, March 2.—The poor and rich alike might aspire to state offices under a new and indirect primary election system proposed by Representative Norman Flagg, he said in an address today before the City Club.

With the present direct primary law a general primary election may cost several million dollars, he declared, adding that in last Tuesday's primary in certain precincts in Springfield, each vote cost taxpayers from $8 to $10. "In house bill 115 I have tried to simplify and localize the primary idea," he said, "at the same time maintaining secrecy of the primary. This bill provides that in every precinct of the state the members of each political party shall, by secret ballot, elect precinct delegates in proportion to the voting strength of the party. This would take place the first Tuesday in April of the even years. These delegates would represent their party and nominate county candidates and also select delegates to the higher convention. The only expense is the printing of small ballots for each precinct."

CO-ORDINATION OF RAILWAYS AND WAR DEPARTMENT PLAN

Conference Held Today By Rail Heads and Dept. Officials.

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Washington, March 2.—Rail transportation officials and business leaders met with War Department officers today to work out plans for national defense by which war-time endeavors in business, transportation and the government may be coordinated into a workable unit.

The gathering was addressed by Secretary Weeks and Major Gen. J. L. Hines, chief of staff. Secretary Weeks emphasized the vital need of transportation and explained that armed force depended for its effectiveness upon movement, "an indispensable element of war."

"You are here," he told the railroad men, "to lend your expert advice so that our defense plans shall be in conformity with the actual capacities of our transportation lines and to adjust your ideas of wartime endeavor and the War Department ideas, until the two fit closely together in a workable unit."

General Hines described more in detail what services to national defense the army expected the transportation lines to render in an emergency. "Our regulations," General Hines said, "definitely assign operation and maintenance of railroads in the theater of operations under the control of the commander-in-chief to the railway engineer troops. On the other hand it is proposed the actual operation of railroads in the zone of the interior shall be in charge of the railroads themselves under such a plan for unified control as shall be agreed upon by the railroads and the government."

"We intend that in time of emergency all railroads, animals and material in the zone of the interior shall emanate from the transportation corps. The officials of that body will be vested with sole authority to call for equipment to meet the demands for movement of men, animals and material. Competition among army ship-owners will be eliminated."

By Associated Press Leased Wire. San Francisco, March 2.—Habeas corpus proceedings brought by Mrs. Frank Kennedy to bring about the release of her husband, Lieutenant Kennedy, U. S. N., now an inmate in the Napa State Asylum, were to be heard today in the Napa County Superior Court.

It is the contention of Mrs. Kennedy and her husband that he has been persecuted unfairly charged with conduct unbecoming an officer and "railroaded" to the asylum. Naval officials have denied these allegations and assert that whatever charges were made against Kennedy had been suspended pending good conduct and that he was assigned to the hospital for observation after he had been examined by naval doctors.

YOUNG ITALIAN IS HELD FOR MURDER AGED BELOIT MAN

Net of Circumstantial Evidence Woven in Brutal Slaying.

Rockford, March 2.—A web of circumstantial evidence was today slowly being wound around Tony Marino, age 20, arrested in Beloit late Friday on suspicion of having shot and fatally injured Charles E. Patterson, age 77, Beloit resident, during a holdup in South Beloit on the night of February 21.

That Patterson died, the victim of mistaken identity, is the belief of States Attorney William D. Knight, who says Beloit investigators intimate that the handiwork probably belonged to a neighbor of Patterson's, who was known to carry large sums of money on his person.

Checking up today on statements made by Marino during an allnight questioning last night, States Attorney Knight found that Marino had not slept in his Chicago rooming house on the night of the murder, as he had claimed. Other statements made by Marino have also been proven false.

Unable to Speak English

Marino is unable to speak English and all questioning was done through Detective Dan Tarrisi of the Beloit police department. The prisoner was arrested in a Beloit restaurant late Friday afternoon and brought to the county jail here where he was questioned. He denied ownership of a revolver found in his overcoat and claimed he had never before seen the cartridges and knives found in his room.

Bought Gun in Beloit

A Beloit sporting goods store owner has identified Marino as the man who purchased a revolver from him and after examining the recovered revolver, declares Marino had purchased the weapon from him. A court receipt, found in Marino's possession, showed the Italian had paid a $100 fine in a Chicago court a year ago for carrying concealed weapons.

"Things look pretty black for Marino," said State's Attorney Knight today.

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Elgin, Ill., March 2.—Police of this city refused to interfere with a Ku Klux Klan demonstration in front of the home of Father H. E. Quinn, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic church, is the charge made to Mayor Earl R. Kelley today by a committee of prominent church members.

According to the priest, several automobile loads of citizens had gathered in front of his home from 11:30 last night until 3 o'clock this morning, terminating the noisy rites by burning a fiery cross. He telephoned police headquarters, he stated, and the acting sergeant replied:

"I guess you'll have to take care of yourself, brother."

The committee appointed to interview the city council included Eugene J. Berlin, U. S. Senator, and Representative Frank A. McCarthy; Dr. John R. Tobin; Eaton Fodou and Attorney Lawrence McNeerney.

No Religious Service Over President Ebert

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Berlin, Mar. 2.—The body of President Ebert, Germany's first president, who died Saturday, lies in state in his study. Floral decorations are limited to green plants.

For the funeral services Wednesday the body will be removed from the study to a larger room in the executive mansion where Chancellor Luther will deliver the address.

The company, which is limited to 200, will include members of the federal and Prussian cabinets, the diplomatic corps and representatives of the federal state. There will be no religious services.

Naval officers have denied these allegations and assert that whatever charges were made against Kennedy had been suspended pending good conduct and that he was assigned to the hospital for observation after he had been examined by naval doctors.

At the hospital here, where the little girl was rushed, Miss Helen Schuppner an aunt and a nurse on the hospital staff, was called in attendance. She was visibly shocked upon discovering the little patient to be her niece.

KISSING BIBLE LAST DETAIL OF INAUGURAL RITE

Texts Kissed By Former Presidents Are Recalled.

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Washington, Mar. 2.—By long established custom the first act of every President of the United States after he concludes the oath that makes him chief executive is to read his obligation by kissing Holy Writ; and so it will be on Wednesday when President Coolidge takes over the responsibility of the Presidency, for another four years.

Ordinarily the Bible used on such occasions is supplied by the clerk of the Supreme Court, a new book being provided each inauguration and then presented to the President or someone designated by him. Only three Presidents have made an exception to this rule and have suggested that some particular Bible be used, because of its associations, at their induction into office.

At both his inaugurations Cleveland kissed a Bible given him by his mother. McKinley sent to the Capitol for use in his inauguration a copy of the holy book of unusual size and character, presented to him by a body of African bishops. Four years ago Harding kissed the same Bible that had been used by George Washington at his first inauguration and preserved by his home lodge of Masons.

It is the custom for the Supreme Court clerk, standing near the Chief Justice, when he administers the oath, to open the Bible at random, but in some cases Presidents have selected beforehand the verse to which they desired to press their lips as a token of their obligation. Available records show these Biblical selections from past inaugurations:

Grant—Isaiah II: 2-3. Hayes—11th Psalm; 11-13. McKinley—1st Chronicles; 1-10, and Proverbs 16: 20. Cleveland—12th Psalm; 1-6 and 31st Psalm; 12-16. Harrison—21st Psalm; 1-6. 32nd Psalm; 1st Chronicles; 1-10, and Proverbs 16: 20. Roosevelt—James I: 22-23. Taft—1st Kings 3: 9-11. Wilson—11th Psalm; 43-45, and 45th Psalm; 1-3. Harding—Micah 6: 8.

Harlan F. Stone is Now a Supreme Judge

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Washington, Mar. 2.—Harlan Fisk Stone of New York City, resigned today as Attorney General and took the oath as an associate justice of the Supreme Court.

The simple ceremonies of the occasion were conducted by Chief Justice Taft.

The court room was crowded when the new justice ascended the bench at the opening of today's court session. Those present included Frank B. Kellogg, Secretary of State, and Justice Charles Evans Hughes, who presided.

The ceremony of oath taking always has formed a brief but impressive interlude in court sessions. The chief justice administered the judicial oath to the new justice, who took his seat at the foot of the bench and to the left of the chief justice.

Just before going to the Capitol to take his place on the bench, Mr. Stone submitted to President Coolidge his formal resignation as attorney general.

Teachers of Central Ill. to Have Biggest Meeting

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Bloomington, Ill., March 2.—The first annual meeting of the central division of Illinois Teachers' Association, to be held in Bloomington this month, will be the most notable in recent years. The general theme is "Education for the cultivation of personality." The program is replete with interesting and instructive features.

Many of the ablest educators of the country will address the meeting. Those who are expected to appear on programs, who are eminent educators are Dr. Henry Neumann, leader of the Brooklyn Society for ethical culture, his latest book, "Education for Moral Growth," Dr. Edwin B. Starbuck of the University of Iowa, who won the $20,000 prize for the best plan for character education in the United States, by the Character Education League, and Dr. J. H. H. Kennedy, U. S. N., now an inmate in the Napa State Asylum, were to be heard today in the Napa County Superior Court.

It is the contention of Mrs. Kennedy and her husband that he has been persecuted unfairly charged with conduct unbecoming an officer and "railroaded" to the asylum. Naval officials have denied these allegations and assert that whatever charges were made against Kennedy had been suspended pending good conduct and that he was assigned to the hospital for observation after he had been examined by naval doctors.

Pistol Resembled Toy Gun: Baby is Dead

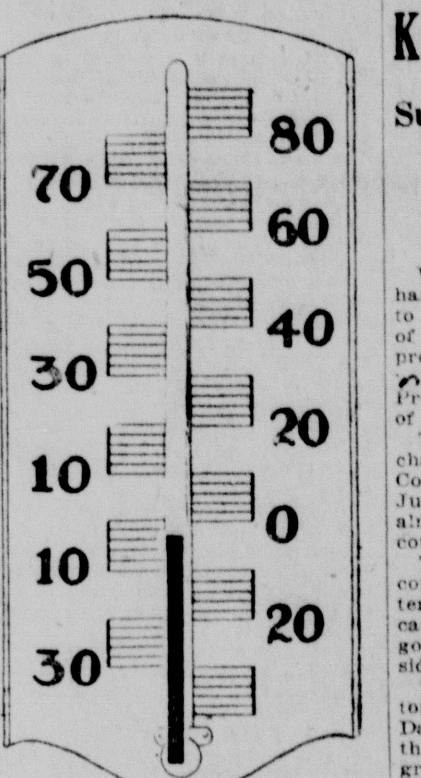

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Elgin, Ill., Mar. 2.—Her father's thirty-two calibre automatic pistol resembled her toy gun, so three year old Marilyn Ruth Schuppner of Plato Center, near here, gazed into the barrel and pulled the trigger with her thumb. The little girl, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schuppner, died an hour later. Accidental death, a coroner's jury decided.

At the hospital here, where the little girl was rushed, Miss Helen Schuppner an aunt and a nurse on the hospital staff, was called in attendance. She was visibly shocked upon discovering the little patient to be her niece.

March is Inaugurated With Temperature of 3 Degrees Below Zero

Continuing the cold wave of the last week of February, March making its initial bow, gave the people of Dixon, Lee county and northwestern Illinois a genuine parting shot of winter weather, the cold winds of Sunday afternoon and night driving the mercury down to three degrees below zero, according to the official government records show these Biblical selections from past inaugurations:

MITCHELL DENIES DISOBEDIENCE OF COOLIDGE ORDERS

Aircraft Investigation Waxes Warm; Admiral Fiske on Stand.

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Washington, March 2.—Brig. Gen. Mitchell, assistant army air chief, today contradicted Secretary Weeks statement that he had disobeyed Presidential orders in publishing certain magazine articles without war department approval.

In a letter to the House aircraft committee the general declared he had "in no way disobeyed or transgressed any known order or instruction."

"It would seem," his letter added, "that I had violated orders my attention should have been drawn to them long before the present time and action taken accordingly."

An editor of the Saturday Evening Post, the general said, asked him last November to write a series of articles on power and later accompanied him to the White House, to lay the project before the president.

"The President reiterated his great interest in aeronautics, which he has always shown," the letter continued, "and said he considered a series of articles on this subject to be beneficial, and that I should obtain permission of my superior officer, the chief of the air service."

"The chief of air service gave permission for me to write them. No mention was made about submitting copies."

General Mitchell attached a copy of a letter he said he had received from President Coolidge, dated March 1, confirming his conversation with you this morning. I do not know of any objection to your preparing some articles on aviation so far as I am concerned. But of course I cannot break for your superior officer. The matter should be taken up with them and their decision in relation to the articles followed."

Patrick Didn't See Articles. Major General Patrick, chief of the air service, said he never saw the articles before publication, nor was he shown the President's letter leaving the decision to the war department officials.

General Patrick said General Mitchell had told him the articles contained nothing but facts and that controversial statements would be eliminated.

Admiral Fiske told the committee he could not agree with the recent testimony by Admiral Sims, retired, that the battleship had become obsolete.

The admiral said he agreed with the navy general board on practically every position it has taken. Aircraft, he added, with other elements of naval warfare, such as the submarine, he opposed unification of the air service.

Hasn't Money Enough

Asked whether he thought the navy air service was functioning properly, he replied: "No, but because it hasn't enough money, I think we are weaker in aeronautics than in anything else."

"Which would you take?" asked Representative Reed, republican, Illinois, "one battleship costing $45,000,000 or a thousand airplanes for defense?"

PRESIDENT'S POWER OF PARDON GIVEN O. K. BY HIGHEST COURT

Sustains His Pardon of Philip Grossman, Chicago Citizen.

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Washington, Mar. 2.—The President has authority, under the constitution to pardon persons held in contempt of court in criminal cases, the supreme court held today in a decision holding the pardon granted by President Coolidge to Philip Grossman of Chicago.

The court ordered Grossman discharged from the Chicago House of Correction where he was sent by Judges Carpenter and Wilkinson. He already is out on bond granted by the court pending today's decision.

The right of the president under the constitution to grant pardons in contempt cases, at issue in the Grossman case, brought into the Supreme Court government counsel arrayed on both sides of the controversy.

The case also gained additional notoriety when, during the celebrated Daugherty investigation in the senate, the circumstances surrounding the granting of the pardon were called into question and a number of witnesses, including former Judge Landis were called before the committee to testify.

Landis Issued Injunction. It was Judge Landis who, sitting in the federal district court in Chicago, granted a padlock injunction restraining Grossman from further violating prohibition laws. When he was brought into court charged with having violated the injunction Grossman was sentenced to a term in the Chicago House of Correction and was sought to have his case reviewed by the Supreme Court.

When about to be committed prison Coolidge granted him a pardon conditioned upon the payment of the fine.

The federal district judges involved protested, asserting that the president could not mitigate a sentence imposed by a court to enforce its orders. They directed the superintendent of the House of Correction to ignore the pardon, and to throw Grossman into jail. Grossman, appealed directly to the Supreme Court, which limited him to bail pending its decision.

Stone Argued Case. Attorney General Stone appeared before the Supreme Court at the special request of President Coolidge and contended that the only constitutional limitation imposed upon the exercise of executive clemency was the prohibition against its use in cases of impeachment. In contempt proceedings as well as in sentences imposed in criminal cases the president was free to exercise his pardoning power. He pointed out that the Constitution in defining the president's pardoning power had declared it could be used in all "offenses against the United States."

Contention of court was an effort to restrict the president's power, which was of itself a violation of the criminal statutes.

To render more effective certain criminal laws, such as the Sherman anti-trust act, the courts had been authorized by Congress, the attorney general explained, to grant injunctions to restrain certain conduct which would constitute a violation of those laws. Such injunctions, he said, as distinguished from civil contempt, like those committed in the presence of the court. He denied that the upholding of the president's power as exercised in the Grossman case, would destroy the judiciary and insisted that the forefathers in forming this government did not intend that sovereign power should be lodged in any branch. The power to pardon was, he asserted, a proper limitation upon the power of the president.

Special assistants to the attorney general, in sustaining the position taken by the federal judges at Chicago, denied that contempts were crimes under the statutes. They contended that the president had no intention to give the president unrestricted power in granting pardons. They contended in detail substantially every contention advanced by the attorney general. It seemed to be commonly agreed, however, that the president's power to pardon was not pardonable, and they could see no material difference between such contempts and criminal contempts to warrant the exercise of executive clemency in the latter case.

The Supreme Court, they said, had repeatedly asserted that contempts of court were neither civil nor criminal actions, and that the president had no power of pardon in them. Much authority was presented by them to sustain this argument. Without power to punish contempts, they said, the courts would be a mockery. The independence of the judiciary should be maintained, they argued, and presidential pardoning of contempts would be a serious encroachment upon that independence.

GIVES UP WIFE FOR OTHER MAN, FIGHTS FOR HIM

Unusual Situation in Divorce Prominent Chicago Man.

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Chicago, Mar. 2.—The Chicago Tribune today printed a news story about a socially prominent Chicagoan who stepped out willingly to let his wife marry the man she loved, and then defended his wife and the other man when the latter was condemned in a suit for separate maintenance rather than a divorce suit.

Such is Richard Tomkinson, former husband of Marjorie Tomkinson, the "Jane Doe" of Mrs. Paulette Whiting's suit for separate maintenance from her millionaire husband, Bradford Whiting, said the Tribune. Mr. Tomkinson is an advertising man; Whiting is an amateur yachtsman.

It was at a breakfast in the Tomkinson apartment, Jan. 8, last, at which Whiting was present, says the Tribune, quoting Tomkinson that Whiting announced:

"Dick, Peggy and I cannot go on like this any more. She and I love each other."

"Well, the short of it was I promised to let Peggy divorce me if I was sure Paulette really wanted a divorce. Mrs. Tomkinson recently obtained a divorce, and last week Mrs. Whiting sued for separate maintenance, alleging Whiting was addicted to 'dope' and was a drunkard, thereby crossing the plans for Whiting and Mrs. Tomkinson to be married."

"She at least must not brand Brad a drunkard and dope addict; he is neither," the Tribune quotes Tomkinson as saying.

Whiting is ill in a Chicago hospital.

More than a hundred fighting ships will participate.

Nine capital battleships form the striking vanguard of the black fleet. These are supported by 30 destroyers, three aircraft tenders and nine supply ships.

It is known as the blue fleet. There are some 45 crafts in this defense fleet, with eight first line cruisers.

Chicago Drainage Case to be Settled This Week

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Washington, March 2.—Secretary Weeks has reached his decision in the Chicago drainage case, but will not make it public until after March 4.

Mr. Weeks said today that army legal authorities had held it was not his duty to announce the decision until after the particular date.

He indicated however that the announcement would be some time this week.

The secretary has decided as to the amount of water the city of Chicago will withdraw and the decision is now being out in proper form by engineers.

Mr. Weeks went over the ground thoroughly with Major General Taylor, chief of army engineers, before finally making his decision. The task of writing that conclusion into proper form was then left to General Taylor and his assistants with the advice of army legal officers.

SUPREME COURT HOLDS ROADS DO NOT HAVE TO OBEY

Labor Disputes with Employees Needn't Be Submitted.

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Washington, Mar. 2.—Railroads are not required to submit to the railroad labor board for arbitration labor disputes which the union has refused to submit to arbitration.

The supreme court so declared today in a decision declaring the roads can determine who shall be recognized as representing their employees in labor disputes.

The decision is regarded as having a serious effect on labor board authority, the railroads having indicated they would ignore it as a tribunal in many cases should the court uphold the contentions of the Pennsylvania.

The appeals brought in the Supreme Court for union labor organizations against the Pennsylvania Railroad company were intended to develop in large measure the extent to which the Railroad Labor Board could determine who shall be recognized as representing their employees in labor disputes.

After the national strike of railway shopmen in 1922, the Pennsylvania company organized among its station clerical, shop and mechanical employees committees to negotiate labor differences, the company being represented upon the committees. Up to that time the union had been in dispute with such employees through representatives of their labor unions.

The attention of the Railroad Labor Board was directed by the labor unions to the new policy of the company in the settlement of disputes with its employees. The board was ordered directing the railroad to return to its old practice of permitting labor union representatives to present the claims of its employees.

Wall Street Review

By Associated Press Leased Wire
New York, March 2.—Rising prices marked the resumption of trade in the market today with heavy buying of the oil shares prompted by merger reports and prospects of another increase in Midcontinent crude prices. Demand for other popular industrials braced Baldwin, American Can and American Smelting with scored gains of about a point.
With private issues assuming the leadership of the advance, a resumption of pool operations was encouraged. American Can jumped 3 1/2 points to a record high at 179 and U. S. Steel moved up a point. Buying orders were spread over a variety of stocks lifting Marland and Atlantic Refining 1 1/4 points. LaCrosse Gas advanced 4 points. Texas Gulf Sulphur 2 1/4 and General Electric 2. Columbia Gas, however, declined 2 points as its recent 7 point rise on profit taking. Foreign exchanges opened easy.
Suggestions of larger dividends on some of the gilt edged railroad shares accounted for the buoyancy of that group in the morning trading. Attention after pushing through its record high of 125 1/2 established in 1909, shot up to a new record figure at 127 1/2. At last, the Consolidated 2 points of the points, the highest figure since the panic of 1907 and Louisville & Nashville at 114 1/2, the highest since 1923. Marking up of the renewal rate on call money to 4 1/2 per cent failed to check the rising tendency, the best exhibitions of group strength being given by public utilities, equipments, oils and minor motors. American Smelting, Mack Trucks and Vanadium Steel, were among the issues to sell 2 or more points above last week's closing quotations.

ALADDIN—
When I was a beggarly boy,
And lived in a cellar damp,
I had not a friend nor a toy,
But I had Aladdin's lamp.
When I could not sleep for the cold,
I had fire enough in my brain,
And built with roofs of gold,
My beautiful castle in Spain!
Since then I have toiled day and night,
I have money and power good store,
But I'd give all my lambs of silver bright,
For the one that is mine no more.
Take, Fortune, whatever you choose,
You gave and may snatch again;
I have nothing 't would pain me to lose,
For I own no more castles in Spain!
—James Russell Lowell.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS—
Keep Off Ice.
Never put meat or poultry in contact with ice, nor lay them flat in a dish or pan. Put a rack under the meat, then set the pan in the refrigerator.
To Measure.
To measure butter, lard and other solid fats, pack them solidly in the cup or spoon, then level off with a knife.
A Cooking Hint.
When dry ingredients, liquids and fats are called for in the same recipe you can measure them in the order given and have but one cup to wash afterward.
For Making Tea.
Always use freshly boiled water for making tea or hot beverages and freshly drawn water for cold ones.
Use Borax.
Sprinkle powdered borax freely under sinks, over pantry shelves and around plumbing. It is a perfectly safe disinfectant.

W. F. M. S. to Hold Group Meeting
The Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies of this section of the Joliet-Dixon District of the Methodist church will hold an all-day group meeting at the church in Dixon, March 3. Reports from the different auxiliaries and a general business session will be held. An address by Mrs. E. S. Nicholas, a former missionary to China, will be given in the afternoon. Mrs. Nicholas has received words of highest commendation from churches where she has spoken. Her four children are all in missionary work or in training for the foreign field, so she has the very best of reasons for being interested in missions. Then, too, her personal experiences in the work are most interesting and give her hearers an insight into real conditions in China. Mrs. Nicholas, the county president of the W. F. M. S., is very anxious to have all of the auxiliaries of this section well represented. All women interested in Foreign Missions are cordially urged to be present at this meeting. Lunch will be served in the church at noon for a nominal price.

ST. JAMES AID SOCIETY TO MEET—
The members of St. James Aid Society will meet Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Emma Geisler, 611 Hennepin avenue.

Menus for a Family
Tested by SISTER MARY.
Breakfast—Oranges, cereal, thin cream, graham griddle cakes, sirup milk, coffee.
Luncheon—Sweet potato and nut puff, steamed spinach, orange cream pudding, bran bread, milk, tea.
Dinner—Pot roast of beef cirrus potatoes, buttered parsnips, romaine salad, corn bread, apricot whip, sponge cake, milk, coffee.
Cirrus potatoes are nothing but potatoes boiled with the meat and served in the gravy. The name intrigues but the dish itself is without frills.
Graham Griddle Cakes.
One cup graham flour, 1 cup white flour, 1 teaspoon sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 yeast cake, 1 cup water, 1 cup milk, 1/2 teaspoon soda 4 more tablespoons milk.
Scald milk and cool to lukewarm temperature. Add lukewarm water, sugar and yeast cake softened in one-fourth cup lukewarm water. Add flour and salt slowly, beating until batter is smooth. Cover and let rise over night. In the morning warm the four tablespoons of milk and dissolve soda in it. Beat into batter and bake on a hot, well-greased griddle.
Sweet Potato and Nut Puff
One cup dry bread crumbs, 1 1/2 cups nut meats, 3 cups mashed sweet potatoes, 2 eggs, 4 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon 1/2 teaspoon pepper, 4 tablespoons cream.
Mix two tablespoons crumbs and four tablespoons nuts and reserve for top of dish. Combine mashed potatoes, remaining crumbs and nuts, cream, butter, salt and pepper and beat well. Add yolks of eggs well beaten and fold in the whites of the eggs beaten until stiff and dry. Turn into well-buttered baking dish cover with reserved crumbs and nuts and bake 30 minutes in a moderately hot oven. Serve as soon as the dish is well puffed and firm to the touch.
Orange Cream Pudding
One and one-half cups orange pulp and juice, 1/2 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 tablespoon granulated gelatin, 1/2 cup whipping sugar, 1/2 teaspoon vanilla.
Cut oranges in halves and scoop out the pulp with a strong teaspoon. This makes it possible to get the pulp without skin and none of the juice is lost. Add sugar and lemon juice. Soften gelatin in one-fourth cup cold water. Bring fruit and juice to the boiling point and remove from the fire. Stir in the softened gelatin. Let stand until cool and beginning to "set." Fold in cream whipped until stiff and flavored with sugar, salt and vanilla. Turn into a mold and put on ice to chill and become firm. It will take at least three hours for the pudding to chill and stiffen.
No sauce is needed with the pudding.

Chicago Center of Art and Religion
Chicago.—In the teaching of both art and religion, Chicago, leads the world, asserted Curtis E. Camp, president of the Municipal Art League of Chicago, in speaking before the Englewood Woman's Club at the Art Institute.
Religion has remained beautiful and art spiritual, Mr. Camp said, and so close is their affinity that in Chicago is found the largest art school in the world and also more students of theology than in any other city.
"Ever since the days when the people were illiterate and manuscripts were scarce, necessitating the teaching of the bible stories by visual representations in painting and sculpture, art and religion have been very closely related," he continued. "Chicago is such a dynamic art center that evidence of it is constantly breaking out in new and unexpected places."
"Would you expect a business man to turn aside from business and paint pictures for recreation, instead of playing golf? But this is one of the strange ways that the great underlying feeling for art in Chicago has manifested itself. The first Business Men's Art club in the country, consisting of business men artists was organized here, and the idea has since spread to many other cities. We still have the largest Business Men's Art club in the country. Another evidence is in the growing thousands of club women that are working constantly for art and the beautiful. They constitute an aesthetic steam roller against which ugliness does not dare to raise its head. The organization of Art Leagues in localized spots is phenomenal."
The Municipal Art League is an organization that sponsors the Chicago artist and his work. The League owns a large collection of paintings, which is for the benefit of all of the people wherever it can be used to the best advantage. Chicago's architecture, its streets, and its gardens are also the special province of the Municipal Art League. The League has affiliated with it in this work the art departments of more than seventy of Chicago's largest women's clubs.

Church

CHRISTIAN CHURCH NOTES
Tonight's Fathers and Sons' Banquet at the church promises a hostess and enthusiastic attendance, according to the ticket committee. The speaker, C. G. Kindred of Chicago, so pleased last year that no other was thought of for this year. Big, strong, warm-hearted, his success as pastor of the Englewood church for twenty-six years is easily explained, and he is primarily, "a man's man." A good program of music has been provided in addition, with original parodies on popular airs under the leadership of Alfred P. Rice.
Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. A. L. Palmer, 610 Brinton Ave., will be hostess to the March W. M. S. meeting. Mrs. W. G. Wells, 514 E. Third will entertain the Young Ladies' Mission Circle at 7:30. And in the evening also, at the church, the Church Board and wives will sit together in a scramble supper at 6:30. The "Loyal Men's" class meets Wednesday at W. E. Hall's, 621 E. McKenney St.

Two Amateur Skating Associations at War
By Associated Press Leased Wire
Chicago, March 2.—The Western Skating Association, whose skaters possess many of the American and Canadian championships, and the International Skating Union whose rule govern the sport in the United States and Canada are at war.
The first shot was declared here yesterday when the board of control passed a motion prohibiting any of its skaters from competing in any eastern championship in the remainder of the present season and in the 1925-26 season.
The Western Association also sued William Minister and Edd Jacobson of Chicago who were permitted to engage in the international and national outdoor championships meets by the I. S. U., although not nominated by the Western Association.
The first break between the skating bodies came a year ago when Harry Kasky, former national champion, was branded a professional I. S. U., despite the protest of the W. S. A.
Recently the W. S. A. sent Harry Nelson of Chicago to compete in the boys' under 18 championship in the east, but the International ruled him ineligible because he had been competing against seniors in the west.

Sculptor Ready to Rot in Jail He Declares
By Associated Press Leased Wire
New York, March 2.—"Ready 'to rot in jail' in defense of his ideals, Gutzon Borglum, sculptor, is preparing the 'fight of his life' in connection with the Stone Mountain confederate memorial, which he says should be completed because it is the greatest project of the sort ever conceived.
He admitted last night on his return from Atlanta that he had destroyed his models and plans after his dismissal by the officials of the Stone Mountain Memorial Association. For this he had been arrested at Greenboro, N. C., on a warrant charging vandalism and malicious mischief.
"I destroyed the temporary models," he said, "because I believe in the right of an artist to his own creation."

TARIFF COMMISSIONS.

Suddenly the advisability of continuing the tariff commission was an issue thrust upon congress recently. When republicans were off their guard there were enough democrats in the house of representatives to eliminate an item for payment of expenses of the commission. About the same time Congressman W. R. Green of Iowa, republican, chairman of the house committee on ways and means, declared the commission an organization of doubtful value.

The president has let it be known that he is desirous of continuing the commission. In the long run it is probable that conclusions of Congressman Green are correct, as they apply to the commission as now constituted. Dealing with immediate circumstances, it is probable that the president is correct in seeking maintenance of the body.

It is understood that President Coolidge holds the view that the present tariff law was enacted at a time when world markets of labor and commodities was unsettled to an extreme degree. When the law was passed, that situation was taken into consideration and the "flexible" clause was adopted. It makes possible changes of schedules on order of the president, after facts are assembled and presented by the tariff commission. President Coolidge believes that conditions are not sufficiently settled to make advisable abandonment of the commission.

Long we have had advocates of a tariff commission on the theory that it would remove the tariff from politics. We have had experiments with tariff commission dating back nearly fifty years. So, in half a century we have failed to make the tariff commission a satisfactory organism or to remove the tariff from politics by use of it.

Failure of tariff commissions may be attributed to two things. The first is that congress is jealous of its power over revenue legislation. The second is that the theory of advocates of tariff commissions is that they should be nonpartisan. As we recall the first commission, it was required to submit its report to congress, which did not let go far its power over tariffs. The report was junked.

In the Taft administration provision was made for a commission, which was designed as a fact-finding body. It was to be non-partisan. The president selected college men who were noted as political economists, but they did not fit in well with the political element that still existed in the tariff.

The present commission consists of men of both parties. Naturally they work along lines of opposite political theories. Their duty is to find facts and to make recommendations to the president with reference to changes in duties on imports. It might be better to recognize as a fact what appears to be the real fact, that the tariff is a political issue and has been since the Civil war. It might be better to let the party in power assume full control of tariff-making, such control carrying with it full responsibility.

If the president is a republican, he would have a commission adjusting the tariff along republican lines. If he is a democrat, he would have a commission adjusting the tariff along lines of the democratic theory. Each should stand on his acts under that responsibility.

It is probable that President Coolidge will be able to influence congress to restore the appropriation for the present commission, and that it will serve until some better method is devised.

THE CHANGING CONSUMER.

Trade figures show marked changes in the habits of the American people. Here are a few of them, mentioned by Theodore H. Price, editor of Commerce and Finance:

We are buying less furniture, less meat, fewer hats and shoes, more fruit, more sugar and candy and more coffee and tea. All of these are significant as regards the consumers' manner of life and all of them involve big business changes.

People are buying less furniture, apparently, because they are living more in apartments, which require less. They are buying less meat because they are being converted, for health reasons, to a diet containing more fruit and vegetables. They are buying fewer hats and shoes because, riding so much in automobiles, they need them less—and need their hat and shoe money to buy gasoline. They are eating more sweet stuff and drinking more tea and coffee because these are natural substitutes for alcohol.

Some of these changes are obviously good, especially a lighter diet and elimination of alcoholic drinks. The diminished consumption of hats and furniture need hardly be lamented, except by makers and dealers in those commodities. But there ought to be more shoes worn out, giving the wearers a more wholesome by-product of exercise they can get behind steering wheels; and there ought to be less sugar eaten, for the good of the nation's stomach and other internal organs.

The President has recently set apart three large tracts aggregating nearly 200,000 acres for reforestation. One of these was the 79,000-acre military reservation at Fort Benning, Ga., another of about 40,000 acres at Fort McClellan, Ala., and third, Camp Jackson, S. C. The Forest Service is adding to the timber-growing area of the national forests by planting from 7,000 to 10,000 acres each year but at this rate it will require 200 years to plant the land in national forests.

At the suggestion of Judge Wheeler of the Supreme Court of Connecticut and other officials a bill has been introduced in the legislature making a person who buys illegal liquor equally guilty with the bootlegger who sells it. The bill will probably become a law.

MONDAY

The Recognition of Goodness

Dead Lk. 4:31-44. Text: 4:34. I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God.

MEDITATION—There is no force in the world more powerful than goodness nor more surely recognized. An evil person will instantly recognize a good one. We do not have to worry about our good being known. It makes itself known. It cannot be hid. As the light sends its rays far through the darkness, so do kindly deeds and godly lives exert a beneficent influence far beyond our thought or expectation. The world is not to be won by science, theology or wealth, but by simple goodness wooing and warming the hearts of men and drawing all in one great brotherhood to God the Father.

"May every soul that touches mine be in the slightest contact, get there from some good, One bit of courage for the darkening sky.

One gleam of faith to brave the ills of life. To make life worth while, and heaven assured."

PRAYER—Our Father God, may we freely acknowledge Jesus Christ as our Saviour and our Lord. Make known to us the secret and tender ties which bind us to the unseen world. Let our lives reflect thy glory and our faith open the doors of immortal hope. Amen.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWIN

by Olive Roberts Barton

NO. 19—MRS. CRACKNUTS' ROSE SHAWL

"Oh, laws a daisy me!" cried Mrs. Cracknuts, the minute she saw it.

There was to be a party in the Land of Dear-Knows-Where. A birthday party! A birthday party for Mrs. Blossom Bunny!

But although every Tom, Dick and Harry and Susy, Jane and Mary, knew all about it, Mrs. Bunny herself never knew a word.

Because it was to be a surprise and she wasn't to know a thing about it until the very day.

Of course, he is the sweetest and to date. You need not ask that in a cleverest baby born to anybody up such a sarcastic tone of voice.

"No, little Jack is just as proud of him as I am. He doesn't know there is such a word as jealousy in the dictionary. I have taught him that he will be responsible for whatever the baby grows up to be. He will not allow the nurse to take him little brother out, unless he goes with him. Nurse says it is positively funny to see how careful little Jack is of his tiny brother.

He talks to him just as though he could understand. "Yesterday he said: 'Buddy, I s'pose you would not know Dad if you should see him. Before you see him again, I think you should get it into your mind that he is the best all round Dad in the world.'"

"Of course, he didn't say this in just this language, dear, but nurse said that was what he meant. She said that the baby when little Jack had finished, gave one of those spry, modish gestures with his little hands which babies are always making and little Jack, grabbing the tiny fist, shook it violently, saying: 'I'm just as glad as glad can be, you understand.' There, Jack, you see what you must live up to. A man may never be a hero to his child, but he certainly must play the part for his children.

"I'm glad to hear you say, Jack, that you are far from perfect, but I trust you are not going to let your two boys find it out if you can help it. I wonder if you can't stay over here long enough when you come to get acquainted with your children. I think in about two weeks I'll have to go over to Albany to pack up the things. Ruth will help me with it, she will be there. I'll tell you all my plans when I see you.

"Sally says that she wants a vacation. Did she say that to you?" "Oh, I'm so sorry. I thought of course, she had told you. Give her my love and tell her I will probably see her before she goes. She will have to stay until you get back from your trip to New York with mother.

"Little Jack is tugging at my dress. He says to tell Dad that he thinks that you and him can make a pretty fine man of Buddy when he gets 'growed up. The idea is all right, isn't it, even if the grammar does leave something to be desired?"

"Of course I love you, dear Jack. I am afraid to tell you how much I tell you all of it, however, when you come over here on Saturday. You don't seem to understand that love-making is very expensive over the long distance telephone.

"Goodbye, dear, I'll see you day after tomorrow. Do I still love you? Of course I do. Am I still your wife? (Copyright, 1925, NEA Service, Inc.)

How to Talk

By PARQUISON JOHNSON

Consulting Editor New Universities Dictionary

Article No. 6

There are all kinds of dictionaries published nowadays—good, not so good, better, and best. Although a number of dictionaries had been published on the other side, the first one to be published on this side of the water came out something like a hundred years ago—The American Dictionary of the English Language, by Noah Webster.

He is quoted as saying at the time that he long had felt the need of such a work while reading books of science. Also he said that he wanted to correct what he called the "vicious" pronunciation of the day.

Mr. Webster very easily could find enough to keep him busy in that line right now. For we all seem to be careless about one thing or another—and surely we are more careless about our speech than anything else. Customarily a man will change his collar when it is soiled, but rarely will he change his way of talking. If he says "just" for "just," or "git" for "get," he sticks to such "vicious" pronunciations like a fond mother to a lost child.

Should mispronunciation not mean anything to you that reads this, it is likely that you are not a victim of "vicious" pronunciation. Perhaps you have been troubled with that malady in the past, and it is more than likely that your recovery is due to properly prescribed doses of the dictionary.

The dictionary is the only cure for a disorder of this nature. Even when administered in small doses it will correct bad spelling, improve your system of expression, and regulate a rundown feeling in your vocabulary. So if you are experiencing any of these ailments, go to Doctor Dictionary for treatment.

After you reach the point of realizing that you really need a dictionary, get the latest one, the New Universities Dictionary, with its enlarged vocabulary and its many new special features. It is authentic, authoritative—a splendid volume that you will be proud to own.

BAREE, SON OF KAZAN

by James Oliver Curwood

A LOVE EPIC OF THE FAR NORTH

Copyright, 1912, by Doubleday, Page & Co.
"BAREE, SON OF KAZAN," a Vitaphone Picture, With Wolf, the War Dog, is an Adaptation of This Story

CHAPTER I

He Baree, for many days after he was born, the world was a vast gray cavern.

During these first days of his life his home was in the heart of a great windfall where Gray Wolf, his blind mother, had found a safe nest for his babyhood, and to which Kazan, her mate, came only now and then, his eyes gleaming like strange balls of greenish fire in the darkness.

Baree, of course, would never know their story. He would never know that Gray Wolf, his mother, was a full-blooded wolf, and that Kazan, his father, was a dog. In his nature was already beginning his wonderful work, but it would never go beyond certain limits. It would tell him, in time, that his beautiful wolf-mother was blind, but he would never know of that terrible battle between Gray Wolf and the lynx in which his mother's sight had been destroyed. Nature could tell him nothing of Kazan's merciless vengeance, of the wonderful years of their matehood, of their loyalty, their strange adventures in the great Canadian wilderness—it could make him only a son of Kazan.

And then came that wonderful day when the greenish balls of fire that were Kazan's eyes came nearer and nearer, a little at a time, and very cautiously. Heretofore Gray Wolf had warned him back. To be alone was the first law of her wild blood during mothering time. A low snarl from her throat, and Kazan had always stopped. But on this day the snarl did not come. In Gray Wolf's throat it died away in a low, whimpering sound. A note of loneliness, of gladness, of a great yearning. "It is all right now," she was saying to Kazan; and Kazan—pausing for a moment and the scrape of her claws on the dead timber died swiftly away. This time Baree did not stop at the eight-inch log which had always shut in his world to that particular direction. He clambered to the top of it and roiled over on the other side. Beyond this was vast adventure, and he plunged into it courageously.

It took him a long time to make the first twenty yards. Then he came to a log worn smooth by the feet of Gray Wolf and Kazan, and stopping every few feet to send out a whimpering call for his mother, he made his way farther and farther along it. As he went, there grew slowly a curious change in this world of his. He had known nothing but blackness. And now this blackness seemed breaking itself up into strange shapes and shadows. Once he caught the flash of a fiery streak above him—a gleam of sunshine—and it startled him so that he flattened himself down upon the log and did not move for half a minute. Then he went on. An ermine squeaked under him. He heard the swift rustling of a squirrel's feet, and a curious whistling sound that was not at all like any sound his mother had ever made. He was off the trail.

A new terror held Baree rooted there. In an instant the whole world had changed. It was a flood of sunlight. Everywhere he looked he could see strange things. But it was the sun that frightened him most. It was his first impression of fire, and it made his eyes smart. He would have slunk back into the friendly gloom of the windfall, but at this moment Gray Wolf came around the end of a great log followed by Kazan. She muzzled Baree joyously, and Kazan, in a most doglike fashion wagged his tail. This mark of the dog was to make sure—replied with an answering note deep in his throat.

Still slowly, as if not quite sure of what he would find, Kazan came to them, and Baree snuggled closer to his mother. He heard Kazan as he dropped down heavily on his belly close to Gray Wolf. He was afraid—and mightily curious. And Kazan, too, was curious. He sniffed. In the gloom his ears were alert. After a little Baree began to move. An inch at a time he dragged himself away from Gray Wolf's side. Every muscle in her little body tensed. Again her wolf blood was warning her. There was danger for Baree. Her lips drew back, baring her fangs. Her throat trembled, but the note in it never came. Out of the darkness two yards away came a soft, puppyish whine, and the caressing sound of Kazan's tongue.

Baree had felt the thrill of his first great adventure. He had discovered his father.

This all happened in the third week of Baree's life. He was just eighteen days old when Gray Wolf allowed Kazan to make the acquaintance of his son. If it had not been for Gray Wolf's blindness and the memory of that day on the Sun Rock when the lynx had destroyed her eyes, she would have given birth to Baree in the open, and his legs would have been quite strong. He would have known the sun and the moon and the stars; he would have realized what the thunder meant, and would have seen the lightning flashing in the sky. But as it was, there had been nothing for him to do in that black cavern under the windfall but to stumble about a little in the darkness, and lick with his tiny red tongue the raw bones that were grown about them.

The sun was straight above the forest when, an hour or two after Kazan's visit, Gray Wolf slipped away. Between Baree's nest and the top of the windfall were forty feet of jammed and broken timber through which not a ray of light could break. This blackness did not frighten him, for he had yet to learn the meaning of light. Day, and not night, was to fill him with his first great terror. So quite fearlessly, with a yelp for his mother to wait for him, he began to follow. If Gray Wolf heard him, she paid no attention to his call.

CHAPTER II

And it was a wonderful world, a world of vast silence, empty of everything but the creatures of the wild. The nearest Hudson's Bay post was a hundred miles away, and the first town of civilization was a straight three hundred to the south. Two years before, Tusoo, the Cree trapper, had called this his domain. It had come down to him as was the law of the forests, through generations of forefathers; but Tusoo had been the last of his worn-out family; he had died of smallpox, and his wife and his children had died with him. Since then no human foot had taken up his trail. The lynx had multiplied. The moose and caribou had gone unharmed by man. The beaver had built their homes undisturbed. The tracks of the black bear were as thick as the tracks of the deer farther south. And where once the deadfalls and poison-baits of Tusoo had kept the wolves thinned down, there was no longer a menace for these mobile runs of the wilderness.

Following the sun of this first wonderful day came the moon and the stars of Baree's first real night.

Half a dozen times, as Baree wandered about near the windfall, he heard a soft whirr over his head, and once or twice he saw gray shadows floating swiftly through the air. They were the big northern owls swooping down to investigate him, and if he had been a rabbit instead of a wolf-dog whelp, his first night under the moon and stars would have been the last, for unlike Wapoose, the rabbit, he was not cautious. Gray Wolf did not watch him closely. Instinct told her that in these forests there was no great danger for Baree except at the hands of man. In his veins ran the blood of the wolf. He was a hunter of all other wild creatures, but no other creature either winged or fanged, hunted him.

ing of Mr. Coolidge, has been taken up by private enterprise; and Washington society, deprived of a prized prerogative through cancellation of the East Room inaugural ball, has substituted a charity ball of its own to be held Wednesday night at a hotel not far from the White House.

Congress, flying in the face of the President's budget bureau, has spent a tidy sum to make its part in the inauguration more elaborate than usual. On the east steps of the Capitol and the Plaza that stretches out before them has been erected a stand exceeding in size only once in the history of inauguration. It will provide seats for 8,500 of those who are to see Mr. Coolidge take the oath of office and hear him deliver his inaugural address.

But even so, the ceremonies as a whole will be in severe contrast to the lavish display of former years. The President has kept determinedly

SIMPLICITY WILL MARK INAUGURAL FETE WEDNESDAY

Nevertheless Washington Is Preparing Great Celebration.

Washington, March 2.—(By The Associated Press)—Preparations for the inauguration of Coolidge and Dawes are complete, and only the stroke of twelve o'clock on Wednesday is awaited for the ushering in of a new national administration.

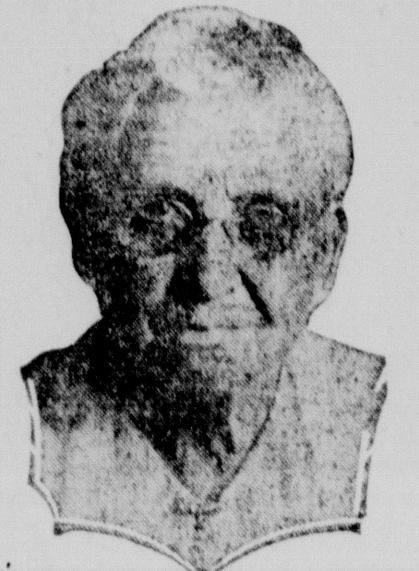

Already the first of the thousands who will witness the ceremony are gathering in Washington. The stands erected to accommodate the elect among them are in place. The dying Congress has entered upon its feverish last hours.

Despite President Coolidge's edict that the inauguration shall be a ceremony without trimmings, there already is ample evidence that Wednesday will be a day long to be remembered by those who look upon the turning of a new corner in the affairs of the nation. Mr. Coolidge's own part in the quadrennial drama will be simplicity itself, but those who helped elect him by the largest plurality in American history have not been content to let the fulfillment of that popular verdict pass without an opportunity to give vent to their enthusiasm.

Decorations Appear

The capitol is breaking out new flags and brilliant streamers that already have made Pennsylvania Avenue a lane of glad color, the advertised festivity of the official ceremony has not deterred the President's admirers in many parts of the country from chartering special trains to swell the crowds that are to honor him; the project of erecting stands for spectators along the route of the inaugural parade, selected by the inaugural committee under the prompt-

Elderly People Can Regain Their Strength

"I recommend Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for a debilitated condition because I have used it and know it is a wonderful tonic," said Mrs. Eliza A. Pegg of 1413 S. Franklin St., Muncie, Ind., whose picture appears above. "It enriches the blood and helps a person in every way. My first experience with the 'Discovery' was after I had the 'flu' several years ago. I am 74 years of age now and I expect to recommend Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery as long as I live."

Health is your most valuable asset. Obtain Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, now, in liquid or tablets, from your neighborhood druggist, or send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N.Y., for trial pkg. Dr. Pierce will give you medical advice free, too.

to his purpose in curtailing the inaugural parade, always one of the great spectacles of the quadrennial show. Less than 10,000 troops, including only those units whose location near the Capitol will permit their participation without extra body in expense, will make up the body of the pageant. Besides the military section, there will be places only for the governors of states and their officials.

This picture will be strikingly different from that presented on the only previous occasion when a man who had become president through the death of his predecessor assumed the highest office for another term in his own right. Theodore Roosevelt was the only other chief executive to take the presidential oath twice, although elected only once; and when he was inducted into office on March 4, 1905, there was such a display as perhaps never has been exceeded in the long succession of inauguration days that began with the installation of George Washington.

Perdulum Swings Back
To those who saw the Roosevelt inauguration and then, just 20 years later, look upon that of Coolidge, there will remain no doubt that the pendulum has swung back with a severe stroke toward simplicity. A troop of Rough Riders who had charged with Roosevelt up San Juan Hill made up his personal inaugural escort, and there were other military men by the thousands from far and near interspersed with them marched the members of many famous political clubs and civic organizations, and there were many monster floats whose cost must have been aggregated a small fortune. In the midst of a stately court of honor that stretched out with towering columns and glittering arches for two blocks on either side of the White House, the Rough Rider President sat at afternoon reviewing the pageant that had been provided by his countrymen to do him honor. It was estimated that, in all, the inauguration crowds numbered up-ward of 150,000 people, not counting the residents of the capital itself.

Both Roosevelt and Coolidge retained the cabinets of their predecessors, but when Roosevelt took the oath again after three years and a half in the White House only three of his original McKinley cabinet members remained at the cabinet table, while Coolidge, after 19 months in the Presidency, retains but four of the official family which took office with Harding.

Correct Clothes To Meet The Obligation Of Every Occasion

The Vogue Of The Brogue

Like the visitor who has exceeded his allotted time and remains glued to the chair just the same, some styles, said to have declined in favor, simply decline to decline. Politically speaking, they are "read out of the party," but they won't stay put. All of which goes to show that the ultimate arbiter of fashion is not the man in London, but the man in the street. Dispossess your mind of the notion that styles are created by a mystical parcel of sacrosanct Poo-Bahs who sit behind sealed and guarded doors debating and deciding how the world must dress. There are, to be sure, many men who think that they exercise a deep influence upon men's fashions, but, like Santa Claus or playing solitaire, it's all in the mind.

In nine cases out of ten, a style is born of a need—a need for comfort; for service; for self-assurance; for smarter, trimmer appearance; for the easier and quicker accomplishment of a task, like knackers for golf. Or, a style is born of the picturesqueness of its background, such as the Scotch brogue shoe originally designed for tramping and country knockabout. A style is seldom invented; it is usually developed, practical usage suggesting its improvement. The brogue shoe was found to be rugged-looking, easy-fitting and long-wearing. There is nothing handsome about it, but it has a sturdy masculinity for which vertebrate men like it.

While the vogue of the brogue has been going on for years and while the trend of fashion for business wear is toward lighter and plainer shoes, thousands of men want and wear brogues and cannot seemingly, we learned away from them. Correctly, the brogue is only a sporting and country model, topping for golf. It has, however, been generally adopted for town use, especially to accompany wool or silk-and-wool hosiery. There it stands with two hulking feet firmly planted. Budge it, if you can.

The brogue, sketched here, is the familiar wing-tipped model having circular perforations upon the vamp, quarter (top) and paralleling the eyelet-stays. It is procurable in either the plain or Blucher shoe and in black and tan. The materials are usually sturdy pebbled Norwegian or Scotch grained leathers, sometimes finished with brass eyelets. Soles are thick and heels are low and squarish.

DATES FOR AMBOY FAIR SELECTED AT ITS ANNUAL MEET

Will Be Held Aug. 25, 26, 27 and 28, It Was Determined.

The sixteenth annual Lee County Fair will be held in Amboy Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, August 25, 26, 27, and 28. It was decided at the regular annual meeting of the Lee County Fair association.

The board of directors of the fair association will meet within the next few weeks to thresh out many questions and problems that will present themselves for solution. Decisions will be made as to the rules for the fair, admission prices, awards, and also the question as to whether or not it will be advisable to hold a night fair will be decided. In order to assure fair guests of clean and wholesome entertainment in the line of show attractions, William L. Leech, former secretary of the fair association, will recommend that the fair directors contract with an organization making a specialty of providing all the attractions for a county fair. A company like the S. W. Burdette Shows, licensed under the Pure Show laws, can be secured to furnish the attractions, each of which will be guaranteed to be of a wholesome nature and without fraud. Following this method of procedure, the fair association will be able to furnish the attractions at a better class of entertainment at less cost to the organization.

W. A. Webber was re-elected president of the association at the meeting Saturday, S. P. McGee was re-elected vice-president and W. J. Edwards, treasurer. The office of secretary was left vacant pending William L. Leech's decision as to whether it will be best for him to serve another term.

The board of directors chosen at the meeting was as follows:

John Buckle, T. J. Lyons, John King, George Malloch, D. C. Leonard, Peter Street, George P. Miller, John Reinhardt, C. F. Welty, A. H. Bosworth, John W. Parks and William Twerner. All of the above directors were elected to serve for another year.

Do it today. Tomorrow might be too late. Insure that automobile. Had you take care of it for you. He is on the job at the Dixon Loan and Building Ass'n from 8 to 6. Drive in anytime.

WIDE WATERS

by CAPTAIN A. E. DINGLE

QUICK, ADVENTUROUS, ALL RIGHTS RESERVED
SERIALIZED BY NELA SERVICE INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

ALDEN DRAKE, formerly a sailor, grown soft and flabby through a life of ease, ships aboard the clipper Oreutes as "boy," under the command of—

JAKE STEVENS, whose enmity he incurs because of a mutual love for—

MARY MANNING, daughter of the owner, who is a passenger. At Cape Town, Stevens is superseded as captain by Drake, whose lawyers have seen to the purchase of the Oreutes during its cruise.

Stevens is reduced to the rank of chief mate. Answering Mary's plea, Jake starts the Oreutes through the Straits of Java, where the ship is becalmed.

Mary persuades—

IRE, the steward, to take her ashore.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

The clacking pawls ceased. The men streamed sweat. Even fat little Joe Bunting wheezed horrible profanity as soon as his vocal powers were relieved of the necessity of bawling encouraging cheers. Strain as they might, they only made the nine-inch coil hawser twang and stretch.

"Even th' bleedin' hancher don't drag 'ome to give us a rest!" he wheezed. Some of the men were less considerate of the ship. They agreed with Tubbs and Slims. All this back breaking, heart racking labor was futile. These, those who most loyally backed the mates and little Joe Bunting, glanced darkly at the racing figure of Jake Stevens in the waist.

By ten o'clock the tide was full. All the movable weight tanks, had been shifted aft.

"Try her now, Mister Twining!" cried Drake eagerly.

Sullenly the men shipped their capstan bars again. Every man in the ship except Drake, Stevens and "Erb" Oats put his weight to the bars.

"Heave!" wheezed Joe Bunting. "Oh, heave an' bust 'er!" It was useless starting a song. The ship must be moved before she would begin to slide fast enough to call for a song. But to move her was a terrific task. With muscles cracking, the veins swelling on the foreheads of the few real workers, only the "Clack, clack, clack" of three reluctant pawls resulted. Mr. Twining straightened his agonized back. Mr. Adams almost fell forward at the expiration of his heroic effort.

"Billme! I'm done!" panted Joe Bunting. Nick Combs, silent hither to, but heaving with every atom of his tremendous arm and shoulder power, glared with glassy eyes from beneath lowering, dripping brows, shaking his head, beaten.

"Ought to make everybody give 'is pound," he grumbled. And young Adams, knowing the man spoke the truth, glanced along the deck at Stevens and at the sail locker door. He knew how useless all this labor was. He thought he knew, anyhow. And the coffee had been pretty bad. Adams was ready to back his skipper to the limit, as was Twining; but he was young, and with the prudence of youth was likely to overlook a few things in the heat of annoyance. He watched Drake, pacing the poop, apparently only thinking up ways to further head-butt and bully down the mates and the men. What Alden Drake was really thinking about was how he could get his ship aloft and on her way to her port with least delay.

"Mister Twining!" he called out. Twining responded briskly. Here was word to quit breaking the men's hearts. Drake leisurely packed his old black briar pipe, and as leisurely lit the tobacco. The smoke was jetting freely when Twining appeared at the head of the ladder.

"Mister Twining, you may 'vast heaving for this tide," Twining's voice enough to respond:

"Aye, aye, sir!"

He said nothing to the men except that they were to have their dinners and a smoke. He saw them troop forward in glee.

"Some of the men are ready to chuck in their hands now!" said Adams. "Break out cargo in the boat? Heave to do it, I suppose. The Old Man knows his business. It's damned hard, though. I don't believe the ship can move before spring tides."

"I'll agree it's hard," returned Twining. "But if Captain Alden Drake says he can move the ship, I won't believe it impossible as long as he carries on trying. I'm waiting to see him set sail and back her off yet."

Stevens watched the last sail hoisted. He carried the last mess kit into the fore-castle. Then the Doctor shambled aft, cursing, taking off his filthy apron and turning it before entering the saloon door. The great hawser stretched taut as a harpstring along the deck, a man's height up, from the forecastle head leads to the fore-leader on the poop. It quivered with the strong ripples of the sea eddies that were the strain upon it. He did not notice the loss of beef and loss of his certificate, and starting all over again. With every shew of his powerful frame at tension, he stealthily lowered himself into the water by a rope-end, clutching the dishpan in one encircling arm until he could set it afloat. Then he pushed off from the ship and swam swiftly towards the shore, floating the pan ahead of him.

He turned when he had almost reached the rocks. The Doctor had not appeared yet. He grinned again; and now there was a trace of satisfaction in the grin. Jake had formed a splendid plan. If he could only win out of sight from the ship before the Doctor discovered the loss of the beef and bread, he would soon be sitting on top of the world. He shambled out of the water, and carried his stores hurriedly out of sight beyond the waterline, and crouched on the shore, clutching the dishpan in one encircling arm until he could set it afloat. Then he pushed off from the ship and swam swiftly towards the shore, floating the pan ahead of him.

NEITHER DAWES OR HIS CHIEF LIKE PLATFORM

Aversion to Speaking Characteristic of New Rulers.

By Associated Press Licensed Wire
Washington, Mar. 2.—An aversion to public speaking is one of the characteristics of the administration to be inducted into office Wednesday with the inauguration of Calvin Coolidge as President and Charles G. Dawes as Vice President.

Neither President Coolidge or Mr. Dawes regards himself as an orator, and both dislike the public platform. The important public addresses made by Mr. Coolidge in the 19 months since he entered the White House could almost be enumerated on the fingers of one hand. As Vice President he made a number of addresses with several trips into the middle west and one journey to the Pacific coast, but he recently announced that during the coming summer, when there will be no session of Congress to keep him in Washington, he intends to make only as many speeches as will be necessary to keep peace with American people.

Mr. Dawes bore the forensic brunt of the Republican campaign but Republican national committee officials are prepared to tell all inquirers that the Vice-President-elect was not easily convinced that he should tour the country. He has made no speeches since the election and there are few indications that the silence of the Coolidge half will be relieved during the next four years by utterances from public platforms by Mr. Dawes.

Friends of Mr. Coolidge have been telling him since the election that he owes some sections of the country a visit, and so plans are under consideration for trips in May to Texas for two addresses, one at Mineral Wells to the meeting of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce and at Houston to the annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World; early in June to Minneapolis and St. Paul to speak at the Norwegian-American centennial celebration, and later in June to Massachusetts to deliver an address at the anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill.

Whether Mr. Dawes can be persuaded to fill some of the speaking engagements Mr. Coolidge is unable to take care of remains to be seen. Friends of Mr. Dawes, however, expect him to confine himself rather closely to his prescribed duties as Vice President. He has one motto as speaker, and that he has expressed in this way:

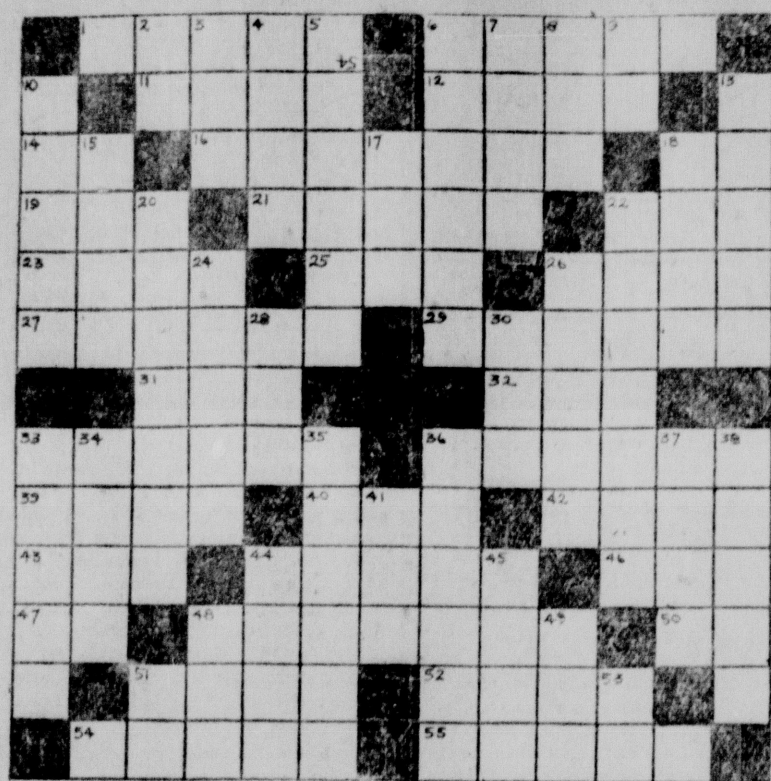

"If you have something to say, say it. If you haven't, keep still. And if you do have something to say, say it and when you are through stop talking."

STRANGE DEATH PACT
Johannesburg, South Africa.—A strange death pact of lovers was revealed at a coroner's inquiry here. A nurse was found stabbed with a pair of scissors. Before she died, the coroner said, she stabbed her lover with a hatpin, which penetrated his heart.

The bureau of markets in Washington has set up a complete miniature flour mill, for experimental purposes.

New York.—A dilapidated old boat buries its nose in the dry sand of Mariner's Harbor, Staten Island. Ricketty planks lead to a tumble-down cabin. Across the rotting bow is scrawled "The Disgusted Millionaire". The decaying bulk seems to stand there as a symbol of shattered romance, the dead echo of the call of the deep.

Around this old ship is spun a legend of two seafarers, Norwegian brothers who built the boat at the beginning of this century, put it under sail and set forth for their homeland. Once in Norway, they intended to fit it out with engine and boiler.

And so they set out with brave heart but became stranded on a sand bar when only a few miles from shore. Towed back to the beach, they refitted their craft and set sail again. That time they met up with a storm off Cape May and were all but lost when rescued by a government cruiser and hauled back to Staten Island.

Discouraged, the boys sold their boat to some young fellows who organized a yacht club in 1904 and used the boat for a club house. With an ironic sense of humor they painted "Disgusted Millionaire" on the boat.

And the years passed, as the movies put it, and the boys one by one married and left the club. Irony was added to irony and the old boat now has been converted into a storehouse.

Interest in Wall Street speculation has abated but little since the big bull market of November. I hear more people talking about quotations, margins and such subjects than ever before. The one sure winner in stock speculation is the broker. His commissions are based on the amount of sales and the market price of the stock. The present table of commission rates is as follows: A minimum $25 for 100 shares of stock selling from $10 up in and including $25 a share, $30 for each 100 shares selling from $26 to $50, inclusive, $35 for each 100 shares selling from $51 to $75, inclusive, $40 for each 100 shares selling from $76 to $100, inclusive, and a commission of $50 for each 100 shares selling from $100 up.

The Service of Economical Management

"So far as the use of capital is concerned"—says a Financial Expert in the Chicago Tribune of February 11, 1925—"a cheapening of the product manufactured can be expected only under economies of operation."

The real problem of industry today is not "who owns the capital invested?" but "how is the capital operated?"

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) invites judgment based upon its operation of capital.

This Company's ideal of service is founded upon sound economies of management. It believes that rigid economy alone can enable the Company to manufacture and sell its products at a price which will allow people in all circumstances to use them in increasing quantities.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) believes that capital should be used for the benefit of the greatest number of people—that oil products should be made available to all—that the price of these products must be held down to permit their universal enjoyment.

An oil field is something created by nature—but nature is no economist. She places her products where she finds conditions favorable, with no thought for man's convenience.

Generally oil is found in remote regions—discovered after great risk and rendered accessible and usable only through heavy expenditures of money, and the application of experience, ingenuity, foresight and thrift in the management of industry.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) refines this oil into a multitude of products, which it distributes so widely as to make them of universal benefit to humanity.

The basis of this service is economy. It is a wise economy, too, which from long and seasoned experience dictates when to spend and when not to spend. Thrift rules and waste is not tolerated.

Through this fundamental service the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) operates the capital of its stockholders in such a way as to increase and extend its power to serve humanity.

MASTERS' SALE

THE FARM OF 134 ACRES

lying about one mile south of Dixon, now occupied by J. C. Wadsworth, formerly owned by I. B. Countryman, will be sold by the Master-in-Chancery, on at 1:30 P. M., at the North door of the Court House, in Dixon.

Thursday, March 5th, 1925

This farm will be sold subject to a Joint Stock Land Bank mortgage of about $15,500.00, which may, if desired, be paid in installments over a long period of years.

There is a splendid set of buildings, and a good silo and also a nice tract of alfalfa on the farm.

NEWS

HOOKED AT LAST

Good Heavens! How had it all happened? Here he was holding in his arms the most exquisite creature his eyes had ever beheld—all pink and white and alluring! Holding her for only a brief, fleeting moment! And then—his heart told him he was in heaven! His head told him to drop her and run, run! But did he? He did not! HE COULD NOT! And then things began to happen! You know Harold Lloyd. . . You know what he can do with comedy. . . Don't ask us to tell you. We haven't the heart. And we couldn't find words to do it if we wanted to! Come and see for yourself!

YOU'LL HAVE THE MOST RIOTOUS TIME OF YOUR LIFE

NOTE.—During this engagement we will rope off the immense crowds waiting to gain admission so that the outgoing audience, who will be weak from intense and prolonged laughter, may reach the street in safety. Each usher and house attendant will be supplied with a bottle of smelling salts to use in reviving patrons who become hysterical from laughter. . . We will guard carefully against panics in the audience—we have one on the screen—that's enough. . . We have instructed all employees to be here early so they can get into the theatre. . . If we find anyone in the audience not laughing—we will send for a Doctor.
